

1600 years of Venice. History, Architecture, City

The 1600th anniversary of Venice's legendary foundation is the opportunity to reflect on a city that has continued to highlight its role as a model even during the pandemic. Venice is not only the place where art and architecture, urban form and landscape are uniquely combined, but it is also a city that has developed over the centuries, pioneering sustainability that is now an invaluable reference point: for its human-scale dimensions, for the quality of its public spaces, for its resilience to natural phenomena, in the way it is experienced and explored. Università Iuav di Venezia, in collaboration with Venice city council and several Italian embassies and universities around the world, presents a series of webinars dedicated to the architecture of Venice and its international influence, based on the history of the city and to mark its topicality.
